

Variable/Field value not being held

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Access/microsoft.public.access.forms/2004-04/1333.html>

From: Chris (anonymous_at_discussions.microsoft.com)

Date: 04/14/04

Date: Tue, 13 Apr 2004 18:34:01 -0700

A for-next loop is not the equivalent of a pause. Sure it wastes time, but it's busy. Try a DoEvents statement. Or two.

>-----Original Message-----

>This is driving me crazy.

>Basically – I have a checkbox on a form that when ticked opens a >second form. Various functions are performed and values are written to >this form and into variables. From this form the variables are passed >back and used to populate additional fields on the first form...

>All except on one field/variable! This field is a sum field on the >second form. The value of this field is written to the variable and >passed back as with the others, however when reading this variable >back into a field on the first form ~ Code runs through without >breaking ~ but the actual value returned is always 0 – unless I put a >breakpoint in, and then when I run the form, it breaks at this point, >all I need do is F5 to continue running the code and !!! it returns >the expected (correct) value

>

>On the surface it seems to be a timing issue. I've put in a simple

>For/Next loop to pause but this doesn't make any difference. I also >suspected that it may be something to do with the value being >calculated on the form, and if the form hadn't been drawn on screen microsoft.public.access.forms: Variable/Field value not being held >yet then how could the calculation take place ~ not so, I have added

>code to calculate the expected total from values held before the form >is drawn... it still returns 0 unless a breakpoint is added
>
>