I have an Access 2003 application with a few tables, forms with buttons that update the tables, or call other forms or reports. This application is saved in a secure location on the LAN with restricted access to it's location. We have used this application until end of dec 2007. In Jan 2008 we converted to Office 2008. When I go to open the application (not converted yet) none of the buttons work any more. When I wanted to look at the code (to debug) the code have disappeared.

I am puzzled. What can be the reason? It doesn't metter if I open the application in Access 2003 or 2007....the code is not there.

I would appreciate any opinion.
