Hi, This may sound strange but since i signed up for msn.com i have had trouble controlling my security software someone or something is altering and change settings that i set. i have checked and even reinstalled my os in the last 24 hrs. and it lead to msn.com also i did not take a security update and removed the patch from outlook express that i was told by a user friend who i trust that the patch has some kind of security problem with it or malware generator. Now when i went today to get other updates something strange happened msn.com loaded wins update page instead of the explorer giving the pagemsn.com which i found very strange then it scanned the as it should but tried to strong arm me into taking the outlook express patch by trying to lock it down in some way so i loaded the ie to see if something was wrong and at that page it meaning the update was not present to choose from. and then that page ie meaning would not allow me to only view and set recommended update and only choose from the list. This leads me to believe that something dirty is taking place here and if msn.com continues with it i'll close the acct. I have no choice. I will not allow them to control or strong arm me into them picking and choosing what i do on the internet. I have come to the conclusion that it may be time to get rid of my windows for a mac. I think these actions are being conducted by people who think that they can commit such crimes against endusers and get away with it.
