

Re: Re: I have been asked to leave the company for having spotted serious security breaches

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Access/microsoft.public.access.security/2005-02/0227.html>

---

From: Some Bloke (somebloke_at_that.uk.net)

Date: 02/04/05

Date: Thu, 3 Feb 2005 21:29:06 -0500

Agent C. . .

Yes, while I think that George may be a bit flippant about his approach, there was another bloke he reminds me of back in the late 1930's who went around warning about an attack on the US by Japan. His name was Billy Mitchell and for his troubles he was court-martialed.

I think that you are being a bit too harsh on him. While he may be an annoying little brat in your eyes, in my eyes I think that he brought about what is a glaringly obvious problem to his superiors and they choose to do nothing about it. In my estimation, his actions are commendable and while his approach may appear a bit bratty, I think that the nature of the problem he has discovered and his organization's failure to address the issue is at stake.

Maybe you should reconsider your chastisement of this lad.

M

"Agent_C" <Agent-C-hates-spam@nyc.rr.com> wrote in message news:aih501pmuthdcre7ro1hdashus5oaaqurr@4ax.com...

> On Thu, 3 Feb 2005 19:49:37 -0500, "Curious George"

> <curious@spampoop.com> wrote:

>

>

> >What the hell sort of world do you work in?

>

> You completely miss the point. I'll bet you do all the time and THAT's > why you get on the wrong side of your superiors.

>

> Bottom line, is that I'm sure you're perceived as a annoying little > brat, who isn't nearly as brilliant as you think you are.

>

> "A Little Knowledge Is Dangerous" -Voltaire, 1777

>

> A_C

>

microsoft.public.access.security: Re: Re: I have been asked to leave the company for having spotted serious security bre

>