

Re: Maxed CPU on file adapter xml receive pipeline

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/BizTalk/microsoft.public.biztalk.general/2005-03/0343.html>

From: Xerox (info_at_thinkscape.com)

Date: 03/11/05

Date: Fri, 11 Mar 2005 16:14:08 -0000

I am just looking in to something as to why this might be running so slow.
Will get back to the group soon.

"Xerox" <info@thinkscape.com> wrote in message
news:OW#90ojJFHA.1176@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...
> I have looked back through the newsgroup history and have seen references
to > others suffering from maxed CPU and eventually having to terminate BizTalk > process on receiving XML files in a file adapter. Unfortunately there is no
> conclusion that I could draw from it on what the resolution is.
>
> The file is a 20mb xml file with about 100,000 records in (the structure is > fairly flat). After 20 minutes BizTalk still hadn't passed the message on to
> the orchestration so I forcibly stopped it.
>
> This was really surprising as I have processed flat files using the flat > file pipeline component with over 400,000 record in it within a few minutes.
> With XML inflation, they were in the order of 80mb in size. Worked fine!
>
> I have not applied service pack 1 for BizTalk yet, which I am about to do – > hopefully it will cure the problem. But if not, then what gives? Why does > flat file parser work but xml receive doesn't? Its going to be a backward > step if I have to rework systems to send data in flat files because BizTalk
> chokes on relatively small 20mb files!
>
>