Exam 70-621 is a specific exam to upgrade current MCDST status to MCITP.
Repeat "current status as MCDST is required".

It does not substitute for initial certification requirements.

If I take the upgrade exam 70-621, then it is supposed to complete the requirement for the following certification – Microsoft Certified Technology
Specialist: Windows Vista, Configuration (which is what exam 70-620 is).
So can 70-621 be used in place of 70-620 for the client operating system requirement for an MCSA?
