LOTS OF VALUABLE AND USEFUL INFORMATION – FYI & FAQ

Great Exam Preps. – Microsoft Skills Assessments are FREE.

These assessments are like mini certification tests. You can take as many assessments as you need or want to and there is no cost. You can find these Assessments at <http://www.microsoft.com/learning/assessment/default.asp>. If you need help, you can also find excellent free detailed Q&A support for these assessments at: <http://disnetinc.com/> and <http://disnetinc.com/FAQ.htm> .

These assessments are maintained by Microsoft to insure they are current with today's technologies. Industry uses these assessments to measure your skill sets, so completing them successfully is in your best interest. Certified Professionals are also being asked by industry to complete these assessments to verify their credentials are current. Don't wait until you are asked, stay ahead of the curve. Do the necessary assessment now. At your discretion, Microsoft records and password protects your results, which are then available via the internet for you to present to your colleagues and industry.

OTHER INVALUABLE RESEARCH INFORMATION

Remember, if it is necessary to retake a certification exam you can "Get a Free second shot" at <http://www.microsoft.com/learning/mcp/offers/2ndshot/>. Do not take more than one exam on the same day. This is a recipe for failure. The sequence you take exams in is not important. Set the sequence that is best for you. It will benefit you to lightly peruse all manuals you may have related to your certification efforts to get the bigger picture but when you are preparing for an exam focus on material specific to the exam.

What ever else you do, I encourage you to use Microsoft's Press training material. After all this is their product, who better to supply training material? You can view Microsoft Press books at <http://www.microsoft.com/learning/books/product.asp>. Most Microsoft press books can be acquired for less at <http://www.amazon.com> , <http://www.ebay.com> or any other auction site.

You can find online training using virtual PCs. Details here at <https://www.microsoftelearning.com/>

A great place to look for support from some of the best technical community leaders is Microsoft's MVPs at <http://mvp.support.microsoft.com/>. You can Find a Community for a Microsoft Product or Technology at <http://www.microsoft.com/communities/products/default.aspx>.

You can View New and Upcoming Exams at <http://www.microsoft.com/learning/mcpexams/status/new.asp>

You can find Simulations in MCP exams at <http://www.microsoft.com/learning/mcpexams/simulations/>.

You can find code samples at <http://msdn.microsoft.com/vbasic/downloads/samples/default.aspx> and <http://gotdotnet.com/community/usersamples/>
