

Re: SQL Server to .xsd

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Data/microsoft.public.data.ado/2004-10/0241.html>

From: Val Mazur (group51a_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 10/14/04

Date: Wed, 13 Oct 2004 21:47:07 -0400

Hi Dave,

I do not know any such built-in capabilities. I think you would need to code it using your own code.

--

Val Mazur

Microsoft MVP

"Dave" <DaveSmith3141@hotmail.com> wrote in message

news:CE3B84E5-E5B8-4F99-84D4-752BFF2B6E3F@microsoft.com...

> Interesting, but not exactly what I was looking for. I would like to > somehow > output an XSD from an entire database schema, or accomplish something to > the > means of synchronizing database changes to the internal schema of the > application so I don't have to do double duty. It would nice to have

> "system"

> dataset that represents the entire database but changes to the physical > SQL

> db would change the dataset's schema. That's why I thought if there is > some

> way to output an XML .xsd from SQL, I could just overwrite the old xsd > without going in making manual changes. May be a pipe-dream although I > don't > think it would be a difficult thing to do if I had the right tools.

>

> Thanks very much for your response.

>

> -Dave

>

> "Val Mazur" wrote:

>

>> Hi,

>>

>> Do you need to get schema of specific table in a SQL Server? If yes, then

>> check next example

>>

>> <http://support.microsoft.com/default.aspx?scid=kb;en-us;309488>

>>

>> --

>> Val Mazur

>> Microsoft MVP

>>

>>

>> "Dave" <DaveSmith3141@hotmail.com> wrote in message

>> news:40EF9DFF-FCEC-4C07-A1EB-B430915FE079@microsoft.com...

Re: SQL Server to .xsd

microsoft.public.data.ado: Re: SQL Server to .xsd

```
>> > I'm working on my first major project with .net and getting run over >> > with >> > maintaining two schema's one within SQL Server and then the schema >> > within
>> > the >> > application. I worked with the XML schema briefly but was frustrated in >> > not >> > knowing how to make changes to it. Is there a way to produce the .xsd >> > file
>> > from SQL Server and just overwrite the one that the application would >> > read
>> > in?
>> > This would change my life if there was a way to easily marry the two >> > together. Any good resources or advice would be greatly appreciated. I >> > am >> > using SQL Server 2000 which I know has tools to support XML
>> >
>> > Thanks in advance!
>> > --
>> > -Dave
>>
>>
>>
```