

Re: ADO Shape and Subqueries

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Data/microsoft.public.data.ado/2005-02/0250.html>

From: James (See.My.Sig_at_The.Bottom.com)

Date: 02/19/05

Date: Sat, 19 Feb 2005 04:35:04 GMT

i need to do this also. how would you reference the previous recordset in the second recordset, since you suggest making two recordsets insted of doing this in one. My reasoning for needing a shape clause that includes the same table is because i want to create a hiararchical tree of Employees and there Managers. is this the right direction for me to be researching to solve my problem?

"Stephen Howe" <stephenPOINThoweATtns-globalPOINTcom> wrote in message news:uX2DRuffFHA.3336@TK2MSFTNGP10.phx.gbl...

>> However, when I try the subquery, I get an 'unexpected error'

>> when I execute it in code (VB6).

>

> Is this subquery executing at the same time as the query is?

> If so, I believe you cannot have 2 server-sided, forwardonly, readonly > cursors working off the same connection at the same time. Change the > cursor

> properties for one and all will be well.

>

>> If I take the same code and put it in Query

>> Analyzer (stripping away the shape related items – they don't work under >> Query Analyzer), it works just fine.

>

> Yes but you are not doing the 2nd query while the 1st has not finished > executing in QA.

> You are doing them sequentially in QA, one after the other, and that is > the > difference.

>

> I could be mistaken but I believe this is true.

>

> Stephen Howe

>

>