I'm not sure what the problem is – the fact that you have to go on-line for the documentation, or you don't like the way it is structured? If the former, look for "ado28.chm" – on my system it is in the C:\Windows\Help folder. If you don't already have it, I believe it is included in the SDK –

If the problem is that you don't like the way the documentation is structured, though, I'm afraid the .chm file won't help, as it is identical to the on-line documentation.
