

Re: ADO data object using COM or assembly?

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Data/microsoft.public.data.ado/2006-01/msg00082.html>

- From: "Stephen Howe" <sjhoweATdialDOTpipexDOTcom>
 - Date: Fri, 27 Jan 2006 00:13:51 -0000
-

> I am new in VS.net. We try to migrate our VB6 application to .net. In our > VB6 application, we have a middle tier data access object to handle the > connection and stored procedures' calls. Do we still do middle tier DO in > COM? or in just Assembly? why?

You would be better off asking this in the ADO.NET newsgroup.
This newsgroup is devoted to classic ADO, pre .NET.
All .NET newsgroups have "dotnet" somewhere in the title.
Try here:

microsoft.public.dotnet.framework.adonet

Stephen Howe

-
- Prev by Date: Re: Newbie : Oracle data to Access table.
 - Next by Date: Re: ADO Excel connection string reference documentation
 - Previous by thread: Command object stops prematurely without error?
 - Next by thread: Re: ADO Excel connection string reference documentation
 - Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread