Re: Which is best?

Source:
http://www.tech−archive.net/Archive/Development/microsoft.public.win32.programmer.ui/2007−09/msg00085.html

- From: "Sam Hobbs" <samuel@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
- Date: Sat, 15 Sep 2007 13:26:47 −0700

This is not the place to ask this question for the best answer if you are asking about software that interfaces with the software. This newsgroup is for questions about software that interfases with people, not devices.

I have not participated in this newsgroup very much so to that extent it does not matter to me if this question is asked here. I am just saying that for the person asking the question, this is not the ideal place to ask it.

"SmartRoss" <SmartRoss@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:89452E9F−819D−42DE−8386−76464895B2AC@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

> I am wondering what language is best to learn for programming commercial software that may use external devices? I have started on C++, but I am wondering if I should then make a move to C# or another language. Please help!

.