

Re: Remote Linux Shutdown

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/DotNet/microsoft.public.dotnet.csharp.general/2005-01/0094.html>

rublicek_at_pobox.sk

Date: 01/26/05

Date: 26 Jan 2005 06:42:37 -0800

Well, I tried to find some implementations of WMI on Linux, but I wasn't succesfull. I think the solution with SSH suits me well. Thank you anyway. If you find any implementation or find out about Linux and WMI please let me know.

Regards Martin Rublik

cecil@ceciltech.com wrote:

- > Martin, Sounds like the sort of thing you could do with WBEM.
- > Microsoft's implementation of this standard is WMI check out the class:
- > System.Management.ManagementClass. There is at least one and probably
- > a couple of implementations for Linux. If you are not familiar with
- > those acronyms do a google search. I am sure the results will be much
- > more helpful than what I could write. I have just started to look
- > into
- > this technology and it looks very interesting. This link has a lot
- > of
- > info on WMI:
- > <http://www.microsoft.com/technet/scriptcenter/default.aspx>
- >
- > Please reply back to this group if you do go this route and it works
- > out. I would be very interested to know.
- > Hope this helps...Cecil Howell