Yes of course:

private void btnLogin_Click(object sender, System.EventArgs e)
    bool pwdVerified = false;
    try
    {
        pwdVerified = VerifyPassword(txtUserName.Text, txtPassword.Text);
    }
    catch (Exception ex)
        lblMessage.Text = ex.Message;
        return;
    }
    if (pwdVerified == true)
        lblMessage.Text = "";
        // Creates an authentication ticket and attaches it to the cookie's
        // collection of the outgoing // response. It does not perform a redirect.
        FormsAuthentication.SetAuthCookie(txtUserName.Text, true);
        // Set the UserID in the session variable
        Session["UserID"] = txtUserName.Text;
        // Move to the Selection screen
        Response.Redirect("Selection.aspx");
    }
    else
    {
        lblMessage.Text = "Invalid username or password";
    }
}
```

Nothing much to it than that really.

Any ideas?
