

Re: Outputting text when using code behind?

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/DotNet/microsoft.public.dotnet.framework.aspnet/2004-09/6337.html>

From: Andrei Pociu (andrei_pociu_at_geekpedia.com)

Date: 09/28/04

Date: Tue, 28 Sep 2004 17:09:43 +0300

So every part of a website should be coded using different user controls?
For the menu I should use one user control, for the latest news box another user control and so on?

Oh, and do you know some example website source code available which I can download?

Thank you for your answers.

"Andrei Pociu" <andrei_pociu@geekpedia.com> wrote in message news:usxgnCWpEHA.348@TK2MSFTNGP15.phx.gbl...

>I have a major doubt about outputting text in ASP .NET when using code >behind.

>

> I know most of the output you gain from a code behind file (.aspx.cs) is > outputted to the Webform (.aspx) using labels, datagrids, datalists...

> Also, I know you can output directly using Response.Write(). But this > places the output at the beginning of the file.

>

> How can you output the text at a specific place in the HTML code? An > example would be when building a menu on a website and you retrieve the > items from a database using the code in a code-behind file.

> I'm guessing that the solution has to be something like inserting > a custom tag into the aspx.cs file which will be replaced with the output > controlled from the aspx.cs file.

>

> Thank you for your support.

>