If you want to control the access on files and directories using windows accounts then easiest would be to use windows auth and impersonation. Otherwise

You need a mapping between your user account (one that was used to login with forms auth) and actual windows account. Or some kind of table that defines what files or folders the user can access.

Hello everybody,
I am using System.IO GetDirectories() method and GetFiles method to display all the files and directory on a DataGrid. Now I want to restrict access to Users to this directory and files. They should not be able to view this directory and files. How do I set the permissions from ASPX page .I am using forms authentication.

Pls guide..

Kapil
