google: C# for C++ developers

That phrase turned up an awful lot of FAQs and other resources so I have to agree I would have been a bit more creative and started by searching the web when looking for "links" which were asked for as any I could provide are just going to turn up by searching anyway.

Then I follow up in the newsgroups for refining what I thought I learned from searching the web or what could not be found given a reasonable effort.

I would also submit the same search using the google site: filter...

C# for C++ developers site:msdn2.microsoft.com

That's how you get some "Action" ainna? ;-)

Hi,
I am a reasonably experienced programmer who has programmed extensively in C & C++. I know a little bit of C#.

I am looking for some tutorials/resources from which I can learn how to write ASP.net websites in C# – does anyone have any links?
