

Re: need a definition / bespoke code?

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/DotNet/microsoft.public.dotnet.general/2004-11/2202.html>

From: Marc Miller (mm1284_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 11/23/04

Date: Tue, 23 Nov 2004 13:48:32 -0500

Charles,

Thank you. Quite an elegant explanation. I appreciate your response.

Marc

"Charles Law" <blank@nowhere.com> wrote in message
news:%23hMZvwY0EHA.1452@TK2MSFTNGP11.phx.gbl...

> Hi Marc

>

> Code is bespoke if it is written specifically for a single client and or to > solve a specific, isolated problem. Thus, something like Microsoft Word is > not bespoke because it is sold off-the-shelf, and is therefore the opposite > of bespoke.

>

> If a client employs you to write a program to transmit data from his widget

> to his mainframe, then you could consider that code to be bespoke because it > would not be required by anyone else and you are creating it explicitly for > this one client.

>

> HTH

>

> Charles

>

>

> "Marc Miller" <mm1284@hotmail.com> wrote in message

> news:%23iXfrrY0EHA.2624@TK2MSFTNGP11.phx.gbl...

>> Ok, here's a new one that I can't find a definition for on the NET.

>> I'm reading an article at >> <http://www.dotnetjohn.com/articles.aspx?articleid=72> which mentions

>> writing

>> 'bespoke code'.

>>

microsoft.public.dotnet.general: Re: need a definition / bespoke code?

> > Anyone know what this is?

> >

> > Thanks,

> > Marc Miller

> >

> >

>

>