

Re: How to share a .cs

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/DotNet/microsoft.public.dotnet.languages.csharp/2005-03/0731.html>

From: Tim Wilson ("Tim")

Date: 03/02/05

Date: Wed, 2 Mar 2005 10:33:14 -0500

> The "link file" can't be used in web application is so inconvenient.
Agreed. I don't know exactly why this feature was left out of web projects, other than what I stated before, but it's definitely a nice feature to have. Your other option in this case is to just compile the shared functionality into an assembly, class library, and reference this assembly in all projects as needed.

--

Tim Wilson
.Net Compact Framework MVP
"ad" <ad@wfes.tcc.edu.tw> wrote in message
news:uaJtR9wHFHA.2736@TK2MSFTNGP09.phx.gbl...
> Thank a lot!
> My project is a web application, so I can't find the "link file" item.
> But if I open a windows applicaiton, the "link file" appear.
> The "link file" can't be used in web application is so inconvenient.
>
>
>
> "Tim Wilson" <TIM(UNDERSCORE)WILSON(AT)ROGERS(PERIOD)COM> ¼¼g@ó¼l¥ó·s»D
> :08METYuHFHA.3928@TK2MSFTNGP09.phx.gbl...
> > After you select the appropriate cs file in the list, when you click on > the > > drop down arrow on the "Open" button you should see a small context menu > > appear with the options "Open", "Open With...", and "Link File". If you > > don't see the "Link File" option, here are a few questions.
> >
> > Are you creating a web application, by chance? I have read that this > option > > is not available through web projects due to it being viewed as a security > > issue.
> >
> > If you are not creating a web app, are you using VS.Net 2002 or 2003?
It's > > possible, although I can't confirm this because I no longer have 2002 > > installed, that this feature is not in the 2002 product.
> >
> > --
> > Tim Wilson
> > .Net Compact Framework MVP
> >
> > "ad" <ad@wfes.tcc.edu.tw> wrote in message

