

Re: Windows app or ASP.NET ?

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/DotNet/microsoft.public.dotnet.languages.csharp/2007-09/msg03481.html>

- From: "Alan T" <alanNOSPAMpltse@xxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 28 Sep 2007 15:31:01 +1000
-

Thank you very much the advices you all guys have given.
First of all, some threads discussed about my top-post, yes, this is my habit as a result of my using Outlook Express as newsreader, that's the default. I only use bottom-post when there are more than 1 previous material to refer.

I forgot to mention in my original message, I have been programming C# using VS 2005 for 6 months, but really have not much knowledge about the CSS, session, web security (although several years ago I worked with web project using Javascript and HTML).

I agree I should start with Windows application but not sure WHEN I should start learning ASP .NET?
Can I just buy a book like Beginning ASP.NET with C# that go forward without through understanding of Javascript, CSS, HTML, XHTML, sessions, Ajax.....etc.

Alan,

Take the one that gives you the most fun. Be aware that you need for an open ASP.Net server, those are not always provided, you can use your own

ASP.Net

computer as it is a professional version, however then your computer is almost wide open if you have not very strong firewall hard- or software.

Beside that you need then a continuous connection to internet. I live in Holland where that is common for most people, I assume that this is not standard in Australia.

Re: Windows app or ASP.NET ?