

Re: Form controls security

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/DotNet/microsoft.public.dotnet.languages.vb/2004-08/3125.html>

---

From: Nikolay Petrov (johntup2_at_mail.bg)

Date: 08/17/04

Date: Tue, 17 Aug 2004 15:02:53 +0300

Ken, I don't need the Windows Users and Groups. I have my own users and groups in DB.

My actual question is how to define some kind of ACL and use them on controls.

"Ken Tucker [MVP]" <vb2ae@bellsouth.net> wrote in message news:ukEoe%23DhEHA.904@TK2MSFTNGP09.phx.gbl...

> Hi,

>

>

> <http://msdn.microsoft.com/library/default.asp?url=/library/en-us/cpref/html/frlrfssystemsecurityprincipalwindowsprinc>

>

> Ken

> -----

> "Nikolay Petrov" <johntup2@mail.bg> wrote in message

> news:u64YcaDhEHA.1656@TK2MSFTNGP09.phx.gbl...

> Hi everyone!

> I am developing app, which should be used by users, which are members of different groups.

> These users and groups are stored in my SQL database and are custom for my application, they are not Windows users.

> Every user can be member of many groups.

> What I need is a some kind of baseline, how to implement security in my app, > based on these users and groups.

> By security I mean enabling and disabling different functionality of my app, > mostly disabling controls.

> Should I use some kind of ACL, or on every Form load event I should enable or disable controls, based on the group membership of user.

> Because I am a newbie, some source code will be helpfull.

>

> TIA

>

>

>