At the bottom of the Amazon page are links to their sites for Canada, United Kingdom, Germany, Japan, France and China. Maybe one of those will ship to your country.

Bob, thanks for the offer. My only hope is finding a way to purchase a copy of Office 2007 from this country. You would think it would be an easy task. Amazon won't even ship it to this country.

I was going to offer to back-convert them for you (with the reduced functionality that comes with that), but 53Mb wouldn't arrive, and I guess that at that size they are confidential.

Bob, I have about 10 files, the largest of which is 53 megabytes. The reason I was using the Excel beta was that the new version didn't have a row restriction, and several of the large files have about 100,000 rows. I want to purchase Excel 2007, but MS's complicated purchasing system is making it difficult. I tried to order from amazon, but they said they only ship to U.S. addresses, so I'm in a pickle.

I installed MS Office 2007 beta 2 and I believe beta 2 TR, but I forgot to convert my excel files back to 2003 format when I left the US to travel to another country for an extended vacation. I realize that was a foolish mistake when working with betas, but errare humanum est. I have MS Office 2003 installed on my second computer, the smaller one I took with me on my trip.

I am unable to buy MS Office 2007 here in the country I'm in (the product is only sold in the U.S.), so I'm in kind of a bind. Apparently I can

Re: Beta Problem

download
and install Beta 2 TR (which expires March 1, but that would give me a few days to convert back to 2003 formats), but I need to have previous betas
already installed, and these betas have already expired
as I understand
it.
Could anyone please give me some advice? Thanks.
