

Re: Workbook_Open() will not run

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Excel/microsoft.public.excel.programming/2004-12/2253.html>

---

From: Jack Sheet (mind-the-gap_at_DEEPblueyonder.co.uk)

Date: 12/08/04

Date: Wed, 8 Dec 2004 23:21:23 -0000

Thanks. Already thought of that, so I deleted all the code from the Workbook_Open() except for a msgbox instruction – no dice. Put that one line into Auto_Open() and it worked.

I wonder if it may be symptomatic of some workbook corruption and if it is whether there is a quick way of filtering out corruptions of this nature.

--

```
Return email address is not as DEEP as it appears
"Paul B" <to_much_spam_to_list@nospam.com> wrote in message
news:O8eCHsW3EHA.1408@TK2MSFTNGP10.phx.gbl...
> Jack, Don't know what you code looks like , may need to post the code and > see if somebody can see anything in it that could be causing this to > happen, maybe on error exit sub? What happens if you try a simple macro to > test it, like this > Private Sub Workbook_Open()
> MsgBox "It Works!"
> End Sub
>
>
> --
> Paul B
> Always backup your data before trying something new > Please post any response to the newsgroups so others can benefit from it > Feedback on answers is always appreciated!
> Using Excel 2002 & 2003
>
> "Jack Sheet" <mind-the-gap@DEEPblueyonder.co.uk> wrote in message > news:uLj0GdW3EHA.3316@tk2msftngp13.phx.gbl...
>> Thanks.
>> I don't think that it is a sticky shift key, because I emailed the >> workbook from work to home and it displays the same problem.
>> At home I am using Office XP Pro 2002 SP2
>> I think it is the same version at the office.
>> The other macros work OK, so in principle the security settings permit >> macro execution (I get a warning message that it contains macros when I >> load the file, and I choose to "enable macros").
>> Also, I tried putting the code into an Auto_Open() macro in a general >> module and that seemed to run OK. It just won't work from >> Workbook_Open() in the ThisWorkbook module.
>>
>> --
>> Return email address is not as DEEP as it appears
>> "Paul B" <to_much_spam_to_list@nospam.com> wrote in message
>> news:uqzWbTW3EHA.4092@TK2MSFTNGP14.phx.gbl...
>>> Jack , it could also could be a sticking shift key, that will keep the
```

