

Re: Excel 2003 -- where is the index in help?

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Excel/microsoft.public.excel/2004-02/1565.html>

---

From: Dave R. (daverx\_at\_hotmail.com)

Date: 02/23/04

Date: Mon, 23 Feb 2004 12:07:39 -0800

Hi Don. It's the same way in 2000, 2003 doesn't have a tab for 'index' after pressing F1, though all the help is there because you can search (but takes 10 seconds) for function names and it shows the same function help screens like it did in 2000.

"Don Guillett" <donaldb@281.com> wrote in message news:%23DzTzbj%23DHA.2704@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...
> Excel 2002.
> When you press f1 to bring up help you will be brought to the last you > selected. If you selected contents, you will go there, index = index.
Can't
> answer for 2003
>
> --
> Don Guillett
> SalesAid Software
> donaldb@281.com
> "Dave R." <daverx@hotmail.com> wrote in message
> news:%232IuUTi%23DHA.3232@TK2MSFTNGP10.phx.gbl..
> > In Excel 2000, I could press F1, select "index" (if I remember right), > then > > type the first few letters of what I was looking for, and the list would > > automatically jump down to the closest matches. Like for functions, I > would > > type "mat" and "MATCH worksheet function" would be highlighted. Then I can > > look at how to use the function.
> >
> > Is there such an index in Excel 2003? When I press F1 now it goes to some > > search thing which takes 10 seconds to use, and gives me an array of junk
> in > > addition to the simple lookup I was trying to do.
> >
> > Thanks
> >
> >

microsoft.public.excel: Re: Excel 2003 -- where is the index in help?

>
>