

Re: Inner email was sent to my outer mailbox

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Exchange/microsoft.public.exchange.admin/2005-01/0552.html>

From: Steve Athanas (steveathanas_at__nosпамhere_gmail.com)

Date: 01/05/05

Date: Wed, 5 Jan 2005 12:38:39 -0500

On a whim, have you checked that the MAPI client (presumably Outlook) is configured to hit the global address list prior to the local contacts? I had a problem similar to this before, too, and it turned out not to be the server at all, but a switcheroo on the client side. Good luck.

Steve Athanas
MCSE

"creative" <creativebyte@hotmail.com> wrote in message
news:eDhTxgs8EHA.2012@TK2MSFTNGP15.phx.gbl...
> yes, "outer" means "at an ISP".
>
> But that address does not exist in the receivers of the email.
> And I never create any rule that sends mail to that address.
>
>
> "Rich Matheisen [MVP]" <richnews@rmcons.com.NOSPAM.COM> ????
> news:bkdmt0dit45rol4rdisveoq64cd280hr1p@4ax.com...
>> "creative" <creativebyte@hotmail.com> wrote:
>>
>> >A very strange case occurred.
>> >One of my coworkers send a inner email by outlook.
>> >
>> >But the mail was sent to my outer mailbox which has nothing to do with >> >my >> >inner mailbox.
>> >
>> >what's wrong?
>>
>> Inner? Outer?
>>
>> If "outer" means "at an ISP" then either the mail was sent to that >> address or you have a rule that sends mail to that address.
>>
>> --
>> Rich Matheisen
>> MCSE+I, Exchange MVP

microsoft.public.exchange.admin: Re: Inner email was sent to my outer mailbox

>> MS Exchange FAQ at http://www.swinc.com/resource/exch_faq.htm

>
>