Our web guru here generated a PDF form that sales uses to issue amendments to customer orders. The form gets dumped in a public folder and the users who need to review and approve/reject it get notified via email to go to the public folder and review/update the form. The problem I have is that if multiple people get in the form at the same time, the conflict message is generated and then 2 copies of the form is generated. Is there a way around this so that a 2nd form is not generated. If not, can I set Exchange to display a notification to users if someone already has the PDF form open.

Any help would be appreciated.
