

Re: How to delete of archive log files! Emergency!

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Exchange/microsoft.public.exchange.admin/2005-07/msg02713.html>

- From: "Jim McBee \ (MVP\)" <jmcbree@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 21 Jul 2005 09:07:21 -1000
-

Best way to purge them is to perform an online backup (even using Windows NT Backup). In cases like yours, I have temporarily compressed a few of the log files long enough to get enough space to get back up and running. Then run the backup.

Long term, though, no Exchange files should be compressed. And you should NEVER compress the databases! :-)

--

Jim McBee

Blog: <http://mostlyexchange.blogspot.com>

"DMI" <DMI@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:FF6CF8B1-3DCB-428E-BB6C-D6A268EACAB0@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
> My Windows 2003 Exchange server went down this morning. The reason was HD > space. When looking at the HD I found a total of 39 GB used by Exxxx.log > files in the First Storage Group. There are log files as old as > 9/28/2004.
> There are a total of 8153 log file and each one takes 5 MB.
>
> My question is how can I delete some, a range or all of these files?
>
> If you are able to help please advise and reply to this e-mail.
>
> Thank you in advance for your help!
>

.

-
- References:
 - ◆ How to delete of archive log files! Emergency!
◇ From: DMI

Re: How to delete of archive log files! Emergency!

- Prev by Date: Re: Exchange Management Tool
- Next by Date: Re: OWA Question redirecting to BE
- Previous by thread: Re: How to delete of archive log files! Emergency!
- Next by thread: Server 2003 SPI
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread