

Re: Is this a problem with my email server or the recipients's?

Re: Is this a problem with my email server or the recipients's?

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Exchange/microsoft.public.exchange.admin/2005-11/msg01121.html>

- From: "Susan" <sconkey@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 18 Nov 2005 13:38:49 -0800
-

it could be either...it could be that there's some kind of anti-spam policy that certain emails violate, or that the receiving server is looking for a reverse dns record, or spf record that your server does not have, or it could be some kind of protocol mismatch...sometimes if you try to send an email to one of these domains via a telnet session, you can get more information...here's some info on smtp error codes...

<http://www.faqs.org/rfcs/rfc1893.html>

--
Susan Conkey [MVP]

"Greg" <Greg@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:5B352412-2C4D-4FE5-965A-3E6032ED5553@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
> There was a SMTP communication problem with the recipient's email server.
> Please contact your system administrator.
>
> <SERVER.Company.com #5.5.0 smtp;550 Denied by policy.>
>
> One person in our company will get this iintermittently when she emails > anyone at a county government. Does this reflect a problem at the recipient's
> email server or mine?
>
>

-
- Prev by Date: Re: Mailbox Rights
 - Next by Date: Re: Run rules on Server level\(not outlook rules wizard, but exchange\)
 - Previous by thread: another relay strange issue
 - Next by thread: Re: Is this a problem with my email server or the recipients's?

Re: Is this a problem with my email server or the recipients's?

- Index(es):

- ◆ Date

- ◆ Thread