

Re: Restored Exchange, can't replay logs because no Restore.env

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Exchange/microsoft.public.exchange2000.admin/2004-04/0958.html>

From: Kirill S. Palagin (kpalagin_at_nomail.phxint.please.ru)

Date: 04/12/04

Date: Mon, 12 Apr 2004 16:42:48 -0400

That article is not just about restoring, but restoring "You restored the Information Store database to a server that is in a different forest than your production server is in". Is this the case?

Restore.env should be from original server, if I understand matter correctly:

<http://support.microsoft.com/default.aspx?scid=kb:en-us:232932>

Matthew wrote:

- > Hi, please pardon my cross-post, but this might be a different issue.
- >
- > I've restored Exchange (SBS 2000, Exch SP3) using Veritas Backup Exec.
- >
- > When I follow the instructions on restoring an Information store from a
- > backup:
- >
- > <http://support.microsoft.com/?id=821511>
- >
- > I cannot replay the log files that had been generated since the last backup.
- > The instructions say to use ESEUTIL.EXE, pointing it to the directory where
- > Restore.env is supposed to be. I have no Restore.env. Is this because I
- > used Veritas' Backup Exec instead of NT Backup?
- >
- > Is there anything I can do to get the two days' worth of emails that are in
- > the logs but not in the information store?
- >
- > Thanks in advance!
- >
- > Matthew
- >
- >