How were the additional permissions granted? If done on the server, this is all or nothing at all. Take those rights away on the server, and open the mailbox in Outlook and set permissions there (properties of inbox, permissions). Then other users can use File | Open | other user's folder to access it.

To see any folders other than the defaults you see in file | open | other user's folders, you'll need to grant the delegate at least 'reviewer' rights to the root of the other mailbox in Outlook. Then in the delegate's Outlook, go to the properties of the Exchange server service, advanced tab, and add the other mailbox there – it will now show up in their folder list.
