

Re: Exchange databases doesnt mount on server restart

---

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Exchange/microsoft.public.exchange2000.admin/2006-04/msg00049.html>

---

- From: "Azee" <ayaz.indi@xxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: 8 Apr 2006 04:03:15 -0700
-

the reason not to restart or start manually the store is some of the services are taking to much time to start than the normal and hence the store does not restart.

what i would advice is create a exchstart.bat and put all the services in the command line

```
net start smtp
net start ...
net start..
save the file
```

and put in to the windows startup file.

iniially make all the services start manually

so when the windows server starts without exchange services and shortly after that the exchstart.bat will take its turn and all the exchange services with the store will start.

Regards
Azee

Leine wrote:

Exchange server 2000 SP3 on Windows 2000 server SP4.
When I restart the Windows server, the databases doesnt mount automatically. I have to do it manually with the Exchange System Manager.

Any idea how to solve this is welcome.

Peter L

.