I've been very pleased with my hosting company, ehostingbiz.com. They are pretty cheap and have FPSE and ASP.NET support. The only thing about them that stinks is that they offer commission on referrals, but it's a real pain to get them to send you your money! They still owe me $66.00.

Jim,

You never weighed-in with any recommended hosts for Windows Servers. Do you have any?

I've found in my town that offers Windows 2003 at a reasonable price 14.95 pm, with 3 free months - they seem a little "big" though. They also offer xnux so I could go either way. I'd prefer all my webs in at least one place if possible, even if I go linux on one, windows on three...that kinda thang. I'm probably "researching this to death" again.

| ASP is hardly "FrontPage proprietary."

| I would never host anywhere other than Windows. I run several Web sites, | and all of them are on Windows servers. Some of them are ASP or ASP.NET and

| others are just static. I think you'll have a lot less heartache on a | Windows server. How many posts do you read here everyday that are caused by

| the case-sensitivity of *nix?
