FP extensions are installed on a Website that was originally published using FP 2000 on Win XP Pro.

I then installed XP SP2 and upgraded FP 2000 to FP 2003 in a general MS Office upgrade – allowing Office to do the upgrading without uninstalling the previous version.

In FP 2003 I opened the Website (from C:/) created in FP 2000 and tried to Publish it to its host, <http://deltamusicmakers.org>.

The "Connect To" dialogue box does not log onto the remote Website.

The error box says: Unable to open <http://deltamusicmakers.org> Possible causes:

1. FP extensions not installed
2. Server out of service
3. proxy settings may not be correct.
4. Error on Server.

I can log on using FTP in Windows Explorer using the username and password.

I have Windows firewall "off" as well as Zone Alarm "off." The Hit Counter continues to work suggesting the Extensions are still installed.

My computer is a standalone with me as the only user and I have not consciously set up any administrative controls.

I would appreciate any advice on how I can analyze and solve my problem. I suspect I could publish using FTP, but would prefer the http to utilize the FP components.

Thank you
