I have Windows XP Professional configured as a computer in a workgroup (not a member of a domain). This computer has IIS running, which I've just installed and have not changed any settings.

When I attempt to publish to it from a local Windows ME computer on the intranet running FrontPage 2002 client, I am asked for a "username", a "password", and a "domain". I assume the username and password of the Windows XP Professional administrator would work fine. Is this a correct assumption? Also, I have no idea what to use for the domain. What domain? I'm not a member of a domain.

Please clear up this basic confusion I'm having.
