I am putting up a replacment for my main site and when I look at it using the Server Administration website on the server it doesn't have an "extend" beside the name like the others. When I try to recalculate the site I get an error saying the tool is too old for the website. The website version also is showing a version of 6.0.2.6551 which I don't recall seeing before. All the other sites are 5.0.2.6790.

Using Win2003 Internet Server edition. FP2003 server extensions.

The site is temporarily published at <http://71.216.221.5> if you need to check something on it. In particular I am trying to get the search facility to work.
