I use Frontpage to place a once a year personal Xmas letter on a website, and am pretty clueless about web design. My question is: what is normal sensible practice –does one group a htm file with its images or seperately eg I have a homepage with links to Xmas2004, xmas2005 etc

homepage.htm
xmas2005.htm
xmas2005_files_folder

All the images for xmas2005.htm are stored in xmas2005_files_folder. Do I put xmas2005.htm in the image folder as well or do I keep it seperate (one level above) The advantage of this would be that when I update, everything that requires updating is in one folder (and of course homepage.htm needs updating as a link is added).

Thanks
Laurence
