

Re: Microsoft Security Bulletin(s) for November 9, 2004

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/ISA/microsoft.public.isa/2004-11/0205.html>

---

From: Dennis Lundtoft Thomsen (my.initials_at_inceptio.dk)

Date: 11/11/04

Date: Thu, 11 Nov 2004 12:48:37 +0100

We're applying the workaround until we have the time to test eventual re-releases of the patch. IMHO it's low risk exposure (I'n our environment anyway) – so my post was as much for the community to know that extensive testing in different environments was needed – since it may fail (If it was urgent enough for us I would have contacted PSS right away).

Dennis Lundtoft Thomsen
Managing consultant, MBA, MCSE

mail my.initials@inceptio.dk
blog www.msgoodies.com

On Wed, 10 Nov 2004 08:33:59 –0800, "Jim Harrison [MSFT]" <jmharr@online.microsoft.com> wrote:

> The best thing to do is contact PSS right now.

>

> They'll want three things from you:

>

> – MPSReports

> (http://download.microsoft.com/download/b/b/1/bb139fcb-4aac-4fe5-a579-30b0bd915706/MPSRPT\_NETWORK.E

> – ISAInfo (<http://isatools.org/isainfo.vbe>)

> – your latest ISA Server logs.

>

> We're investigating this, but PSS is the first, best point of complaint since they will contact us if they need to.