

microsoft.public.inetsdk.programming.webbrowser_ctl: Re: Using HTML within my application.

Re: Using HTML within my application.

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/InetSDK/microsoft.public.inetsdk.programming.webbrowser_ctl/2004-10/0075.

From: Igor Tandetnik (itandetnik_at_mvps.org)

Date: 10/12/04

Date: Tue, 12 Oct 2004 17:54:58 -0400

"Nick" <nberardi@zigamorph.com> wrote in message
news:38750649.0410121333.495931aa@posting.google.com > Well this is what my client wants me to do. Build a HTML file for > some provided data and then print it. It all sounds easy when I say > it that way, but I need this all to be done in the background and > transparent to the user. So essentially what happens is the > application is provided a XML file and I need to apply an XSL file, > then print it so it looks like it would in IE. I have tried fooling > around with the Navigate2 function of WebBrowser but I can't seem to > figure out how I reference my application inorder for it to build the > document and then print it.

<http://msdn.microsoft.com/workshop/browser/webbrowser/tutorials/webocstream.asp>

<http://support.microsoft.com/default.aspx?scid=kb;EN-US;Q267240>

--

With best wishes,
Igor Tandetnik

"On two occasions, I have been asked [by members of Parliament], 'Pray, Mr. Babbage, if you put into the machine wrong figures, will the right answers come out?' I am not able to rightly apprehend the kind of confusion of ideas that could provoke such a question." -- Charles Babbage