

Re: A question about activeX control...

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Internet-Server/microsoft.public.inetserver.asp.components/2004-10/0044.html>

From: Joe (Joe_at_discussions.microsoft.com)

Date: 10/19/04

Date: Tue, 19 Oct 2004 09:25:32 -0700

Doesn't work.

"Joker" wrote:

> This sounds like a Windows Security zone issue.
>
> As a test what if you put the web site in your trusted zone for Internet Explorer?
>
> Joe wrote:
>
>> Hi,
>>
>> I have an .htm file which references an activeX control. The control itself is inside the .cab file. In addition there is also a file with .mso file extension. According to the developer this .mso file was created by MS word and contains the graphic displayed by the activeX control.
>>
>> When I open the htm file from Windows explorer, I can see the graphic inside the activeX control but the graphic disappears as soon as I view the htm file from web server. Seems like something happens inside this .mso file. Does anyone know anything about this .MSO file?
>>
>> Thanks,
>>
>> Joe
>
> --
> Please do not contact me directly or ask me to contact you directly for assistance.
>
> If your question is worth asking, it's worth posting.
>
> If it's not worth posting you should have done a search on <http://www.google.com/http://www.google.com/grph?hl=en&tab=wg&q=> or <http://news.google.com/froogle?hl=en&tab=nf&ned=us&q=> before wasting our time.

microsoft.public.inetserver.asp.components: Re: A question about activeX control...

>