

Re: People trying to hack my MS FTP server (but they're not getting in)

Re: People trying to hack my MS FTP server (but they're not getting in)

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Internet-Server/microsoft.public.inetserver.iis.ftp/2005-10/msg00079.html>

- From: "Chris Crowe [MVP 2005/2006]" <IISMVP2005@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 19 Oct 2005 15:22:21 +1300
-

You will probably find that the IP is part of an ISP's range of dynamic IP addresses for customers.

Most will simply not bother to look it up but you never know...

Checkout this freeware tool to identify who owns the IP Address <http://www.itoolpad.com/products/iplookup/#screen>

--
cheers

Chris

Chris Crowe [MVP 2005/2006]
<http://blog.crowe.co.nz>

"Spin" <Spin@xxxxxxxx> wrote in message
<news:3rl4mcFk5oe5U1@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
> Experts,
>
> Periodic review of my system event logs indicate multiple attempts from > the > same IP address to logon to my MS FTP server with accounts which do not > exist. I then jumped over to the C:\WINDOWS\system32\LogFiles\MSFTPSVC1 > directory and reviewed the text file logs of the same date. Lo an behold, > this is where I verified that six times within the last 30 days, multiple > attempts from the same IP address to logon to my MS FTP server with > accounts > which do not exist. Like on the first of the month it would be from one > IP, > a few days later from another, etc. The 230, 331, 550 indicate that they > are not getting in (I do not allow anonymous logon). From the security > tab > of the FTP Service properties, I have denied these IP addresses > individually

Re: People trying to hack my MS FTP server (but they're not getting in)

Re: People trying to hack my MS FTP server (but they're not getting in)

- > to prevent further attacks from them. I have no doubt that I will
- > continue
- > to have to do this, the nature of the Internet being what it is today.
- >
- > My next question is, I wonder if I can go after the owner of these IP
- > addresses in court, for (1) attempting to hack into my system and (2)
- > using
- > up system resources while doing so. None of these attacks last for more - > than two minutes though.
- >
- >

• References:

- ◆ People trying to hack my MS FTP server \(but they're not getting in\)
◇ From: Spin

- Prev by Date: People trying to hack my MS FTP server \(but they're not getting in\)
- Next by Date: Re: FTP site fail to start.
- Previous by thread: People trying to hack my MS FTP server \(but they're not getting in\)
- Next by thread: Re: People trying to hack my MS FTP server \(but they're not getting in\)
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread