

Re: W2000 Server – file system deteriorating

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Internet-Server/microsoft.public.inetserver.iis/2004-11/0949.html>

From: Pat [MSFT] (patfilot_at_online.microsoft.com)

Date: 11/13/04

Date: Sat, 13 Nov 2004 14:11:08 -0800

It actually sounds like you are having problems with AV software or backup software. Particularly if you are having problems deleting, etc. I would make sure that those are updated first. Obviously, I'd love to have you upgrade to WS2k3 too, but let's try to fix what's wrong first.

pat

"Fernie" <Fernie@not_thisDocSignings.net> wrote in message news:892615C30CB4E240Fernie@not_thisDocSignings.net...

> Two years ago, I leased a W2000 server with IIS 5 and it always ran very > well until the last few months when I began to notice that the processor > gradually became busier day by day. A reboot always get everything back > to normal for a few days/weeks.

>

>

>

> Other problems that I began to experience were the inability to delete > some directories from disk. Issuing commands at the DOS prompt did not > work and there were no processes whatsoever holding anything within the > directory.

>

>

>

> To empty the recycle bin has recently become a problem. It takes up 100% > of the cpu and never finishes.

>

>

>

> Since the beginning, I have run two isapi dlls, but they have never caused > a problem, I think that the problem lies within the condition of the file > system.

>

>

>

> My server has 512 k (uses about half of that when running normal). It has > a Celeron 1400 processor (about 20-60 percent when running normal).

>

microsoft.public.inetsrvr.iis: Re: W2000 Server – file system deteriorating

>
>
> Should I have W2000 Server reinstalled or should I upgrade to W2003? Does > W2003 have an improved file system? Will W2003 run fine on my existing > hardware / is it more demanding than W2000?
>
>
>
> Please advise as this is very important for me. Thank you very much.
>
>
> --
>
> ELKNews FREE Edition – Empower your News Reader!
> <http://www.atozedsoftware.com>