I had just completed a download from the server of my email this AM when right after the last email showed up in the window pane as I was quickly reading the content my putter crashed with a BSOD. I rebooted and opened outlook expecting to find the emails in place only to find that everything from last and back was in place but that the most current downloaded emails are missing. I tried to get them off the server again but they were gone. I spent a couple hours doing research and ran a couple programs to try to locate the missing emails. No luck. Are they in a temp folder? They were taken off the server but cannot be located on my local HD to my ability. All the dbx files are intact and not corrupted. Any help would be appreciated.
