This is the first question I have seen you post! That's why :-)

If you start a new thread for each question, you will get an answer each time. If you add to someone else's question, we may never see your addition.

Most of the people giving help are not looking at the same server you are: new posts are always passed on to us by the web server, but edits and updates usually are not. Sorry: they are trying to get the bugs out, but in the meantime, start a new post and we'll see it every time :-)

Sadly, the answer to your question is "You can't". They have taken this information off the status bar, and we can't put it back.

The only quick way to find out which Section you are in is to use View>Header and Footer. If the document has more than one section, it will tell you which one you are in.

Hope this helps

And why do I never get an answer to any question I post???
