

Re: Put Entourage on send menu (word).

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Mac/microsoft.public.mac.office/2005-06/msg00072.html>

- From: Merlin@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx (Merlin)
 - Date: Wed, 8 Jun 2005 07:53:50 +0500
-

Corentin Cras-Méneur <korventeen@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

> Merlin <Merlin@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:
>
>> Thanks Corentin, I'd not heard of the app before so tried it >> immediately. Unfortunately

>>
>> What was interesting was that when I started up the pref pane it showed >> Eudora 6.2.1 as the default email app already – suggesting perhaps that >> the default is set correctly and that Word is ignoring it? So I >> selected "another" and "recommended apps" and the pref pane showed >> Eudora dimmed, changing to all apps brought it up and I chose it again.
>> Still no luck.

>
> I wonder why Eudora is dimmed now... You might have a permission error > on the drive. You should try repair Permissions using Disk Utility.
>
> I hope it's not something deeper.

I hope so too <grin>.

I attributed it to it being the app already set as default, therefore you would not need to choose it again. But that's only my interpretation.

I repaired permissions anyway and it changed nothing.

> There are two access points for the apps that deal with the various > Internet protocols:
> – The higher level: internet config, inherited from the MacOS 9 era, but > it's just a frontend nowadays
> – the lower level: Launch Services, that deals not only with internet > protocols, but with all file types throughout the system. Internet > Config is only around as a front-end nowadays that simply reads the > information from Launch Services.
> If the communication between L