

Re: EXITING WEBSITES

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Mac/microsoft.public.macintosh.general/2007-06/msg00020.html>

- From: J Warrior <toytechqm@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Mon, 25 Jun 2007 17:55:51 -0400
-

Richard H wrote:

On 19/05/2007 1:09 am, in article
2CC5B11D-2BE2-4DDE-B18F-601B07D2EB1E@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx, "Belle"
<Belle@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Hello,
Please excuse me if I post this wrong--my first time. I am hoping that someone can explain to me how to exit one website without completely exiting from the internet. For example: I access the internet using Internet Explorer, then I pull up a particular website, then I want to close that website and go on to another website. The only way for me to exit is to click on the X at the top right of the page. When I do that it exits me completely from IE. This is so frustrating---I usually just minimize the website and pull up the next, but then, I sometimes end up with 10 minimized pages!! Can anyone help?? I sure would appreciate it.
Thank you,
A Grateful Friend

Try the "Back" or "Home" buttons in the toolbar.

--

Reply via Newsgroup

Yeah get a tabbed browser like firefox, opera, safari, the list goes on. If that is not an option that get some sort of toolbar. Otherwise:

CMD+W will close a window

CMD+Q will close an application

I hope that helped some way?

.