

Re: DRM and licence trouble with WMP10

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Media/microsoft.public.windowsmedia/2007-02/msg00099.html>

- From: kondilemma <kondilemma@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Mon, 5 Feb 2007 07:35:02 -0800
-

I didn't consider that the legal route for acquiring music files would be the more difficult road—at least with WMP. I will have to rethink my entire music storage method—time to give iTunes a try. Does that format suffer from similar problems?

Doesn't this just encourage the average user (like me) to use KaZaa and the like? At least I can get the damn tracks to play—not just taunt me from a playlist!

—Brad

"Dale" wrote:

You can try clearing your temporary Internet files in IE and your cookies as well. I don't use DRM media but my wife gets that a lot with downloaded eBooks where she has to take those steps.

I suggest scoring your online music test as a failure and not doing it again LOL. You can get CDs quickly and cheaply from Amazon and rip them to MP3s and not have to deal with licenses or broken licenses.

Dale

"kondilemma" <kondilemma@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message <news:81D67F6C-C301-4162-A560-F8FBC8B6719A@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>

Hi there—
Finally tried purchasing music online (through mySask.com—Puretracks). Everything seemed fine until I tried to play the tracks—I get a License Aquisition window and the player displays "Acquiring license" but never does.

The helpdesk from the online site has advised my to try the downloads again, but this has not solved the problem—now I just have duplicate tracks I can't listen to. I suspect the issue is the player. Any solutions would be a relief—there's nothing more aggravating than having music I've been looking months for, yet not being able to listen to it...

Re: DRM and licence trouble with WMP10

My player has the latest update, according to the Windows Media Configuration Manager...

Thanks in advance,
-brt

I have