

RE: OWC – installation on system with no office

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Office/microsoft.public.office.developer.web.components/2005-04/msg00010.htm>

- From: "Andrej" <andrejh@xxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 31 Mar 2005 22:54:54 -0800
-

Hi!

Is there no license to buy that would allow us to use OWC10 or OWC11? Does it make any difference in that matter if the company is a certified microsoft gold partner?
Thx.

>-----Original Message-----

>Microsoft changed the licensing requirements after OWC 9.

>

>OWC 9 requires an Office 2000 license for any use, and is supplied as part >of Office 2000 and Office XP.

>

>OWC 10 (supplied as part of Office XP and Office 2003) and 11 (supplied as >part Office 2003) can be used in read-only mode on any PC and can be >downloaded from Microsoft.

>

>To be able to design using OWC 10/11 or to interact with the components then >you require a qualifying Office product loaded on the PC.

>

>There is also something in the licensing agreement that prohibits the >distribution of OWC 10/11 other than directly from a Microsoft source. I >think this means you cannot place it onto a CD and use it an another location >but you can give a URL to download it from Microsoft or a location on your >own intranet.

.

- Follow-Ups:

RE: OWC – installation on system with no office

- ◆ Re: OWC – installation on system with no office
◇ From: Alvin Bruney [MVP – ASP.NET]

• References:

- ◆ OWC – installation on system with no office
◇ From: Andrej
 - ◆ RE: OWC – installation on system with no office
◇ From: Paul – Lydian
-
- Prev by Date: RE: Office Web Components in 2003 not working right?
 - Next by Date: Re: Is Cell.Interior.Pattern supported in OWC10
 - Previous by thread: RE: OWC – installation on system with no office
 - Next by thread: Re: OWC – installation on system with no office
 - Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread