If you've lost your installation CD for Office 2000 then you may need to invest in another version of Office since Office 2000 is no longer supported by Microsoft. IOW, you can't obtain a replacement CD from them.

You may find one on eBay or similar site but if you qualify for the Student and Teacher Edition of Office 2003 then that may be the cheapest route to take:

Office premium 2000 – windows me – bought computer, sat for long time because I didn't know how to use. Started using it, picked up a very bad porno virus. In trying to get rid of it accidentally deleted data1.msi files and dll files, whatever that means. Keep getting error 1706 asking me for disk which was lost when I moved, cannot download anything – tells me may not have permission, others tell me contact tech support. 'cannot find valid source'.

Re: lost files and nothing works.

tells me plug ins fail to initialize and flash screws up. Started when all files containing "flash" were accidentally deleted. Got rid of the porn though! So how do I 1) get hold of another disk or 2) get the files back? Saw retrieving data files on microsoft page but doesn't tell me how to get them or download them. Have had to resort to using my Commodore to type anything! Please, in plain simple English tell me how to fix this mess!
Thanks!
