I'm sticking with what I found on Microsoft's site and what I just experienced last night. It could be that a UK Hotmail address is different but it ain't happenin' here.

You can access free Hotmail accounts with OE? And you just did the set up last week? (Just clarifying but that's not what Microsoft says can be done.)

Under Notes, it says "Free MSN Hotmail accounts cannot be used with Outlook."

Joann,I did mention that I had an older msn account,set up prior to the change,as I was notified by Microsoft by e-mail that I would be able to continue using my older hotmail account as

To make sure, I just set my system up to access another Hotmail account that I monitor and I got the following error message: "Access to Hotmail via Outlook and Outlook Express now requires a subscription. Please sign up

What do you mean "The account HAS to have been set up prior to September 2004". Only lastweek I set up my hotmail accounts on a new laptop. they are all free accounts. Did I say somewhere "Your account needs to be "old" to get this facility." are you saying US rules are different from the UK? All my hotmail accounts are myname@xxxxxxxxxxxx i don't like using dot co dot uk address because of extra typing involved.

Try this link:

<http://email.about.com/cs/oetipstricks/qt/et041202.htm>

Your account needs to be "old" to get this facility. I was fortunate to have all my 7 accounts setup prior to MS decided to start charging its customers.

Alternatively, you could sign up with AIM/AOL and get access to the account using Outlook/Outlook Express.
You need to hurry up otherwise they too will start charging if demands exceeds beyond their expectancy!

JoAnn.As I mentioned before that this hotmail account is an older account that I was using with my Microsoft Office Outlook prior to the change.I even mentioned that Microsoft had notified me prior to the change that I would be able to continue using my Hotmail account with Outlook prior to the change but I would not be able to open any other new Hotmail accounts.All was working great.and I never closed my account.All I did was reformat my PC and wanted to know the correct procedure for configuring my old Hotmail account back into my Outlook.If any one has this info.Thank you.
