Thanks Patrick for the fast response that worked a treat, if only there was a general notice for all users might have saved you the trouble of replying to all the posts. 10 out of 10.

I sent an email and got back (in part) the following:

"I understand you are unable to activate your copy of Office 2007 Beta. I realize the importance of your issue. I would like to inform you that Office 2007 program is still in the beta phase of development, and mainstream technical support is currently not available. When Microsoft releases a full version of Office 2007, assisted technical support will be available.

As the issue you have raised is technical in nature, I recommend you to post the respective concern at the below mentioned newsgroups support web link at:

<http://www.microsoft.com/office/preview/community/overview.mspx>.

formal support is not offered for this beta, Microsoft has provided newsgroups to help get your questions answered."

So that's what MS has to say about my inability to activate....

If this is truly the case, then why can't they take two minutes and post an official response on this website. You know, something like,

"We are aware that many of you are unable to activate your beta product. We are actively at work on a solution to the problem. Please accept our sympathies as we continue to fix these issues."

As it is, all we have is a bunch of people complaining about the issue, but no real solutions or answers from MS. This is extremely disappointing.

Try again Monday. MS is aware of the issue and working on fixing it.
It's a problem with their servers.
